

Baron Tweed's Quir Has High Praise For Canadian Militia

Calgary—Canada, like Great Britain, may have a militia, not too large but fully equipped and perfectly trained, said Baron Tweed, governor-general of Canada, speaking to members of the Alberta Military Institute at a luncheon here.

"I take my hat off to the Canadian militia," said the Earl of Tweed. "Their patriotic spirit and efficiency give us a feeling of greater security against the kind of war."

The governor-general declared no country could afford to be without a defense policy.

"No country can be isolated, Canada has to think out a policy of defense and take steps to implement it."

In stressing the necessity of defense and defense, the governor-general said:

"In peace times Canada and Britain were inclined to be at odds at things rather than defense, but neither Britain nor Canada could afford an inefficient militia. In times of war, the Dominion must have a militia, not too large but fully equipped and perfectly trained."

"The last war did not lead to permanent peace as without food or fuel, peace," he added, "and there was still a long way to travel, to reach that peace which is the only peace."

The governor-general said that the Canadian militia was a "splendid achievement" as the spearhead of the British army in the Great War.

Armistice Day Proposal

Proposal That It Be Turned Into Day Of Fast To Promote Peace.

The proposal that Armistice Day be turned into a fast day to promote peace was forwarded by the United States delegation to the World Youth Congress.

Youth of the world under the proposal would go without food on Nov. 11 and devote the money saved to peace scholarships.

A sub-armistice branch of the League of Nations was advocated by the Canadian delegation. The branch association planned for after the war, the organization would deal with all problems of a social, mental character, including wars and peace. The Canadian delegation would be obligatory only for nations situated on the same continent as the aggressor.

Marked Reduction in The Sale of Canadian Wheat To Scotland Has Been Predicted

Scottish bankers who for generations have made bread by the long fermentation process are shifting gradually to the short fermentation method and the result may be a reduction of Canadian wheat purchases. Flurry Murre, cereal technologist of the experimental farms, stated in a report to Miss Jean Macpherson, minister of agriculture.

In a letter of a study of milling and baking methods, the minister has summarized the results of his inquiries. His investigations particularly concern testing machines and chemical methods developed in Europe in recent years, now in selecting wheat for plant breeders in Canada efforts may be made to meet these requirements.

"While wheat from the Dominion," Mr. Miller said, "is recognized in the European market as the best wheat grown, the principal factor to be considered is an inferiority in particular in the cereal in price. England is one of the larger buyers of wheat from Canada and has been making in the last year purchases on an average from 40 to 50 per cent Canadian wheat."

The remaining 50 to 60 per cent may be made up of lower priced wheat from many of the other countries. Judged by the standard price of Canadian wheat, the English bread is not as good.

"A different situation, however, prevails in Scotland," Mr. Miller said, "where wheat may be made of 100 per cent Canadian wheat and consequently the quality is not considered quite so important. While the bread made like other bakers, is naturally concerned with the price factor, the general demand for good quality wheat has been to make bread by the long fermentation process which improves the flavor of the loaf."

"To follow this process the higher quality of wheat is required, as used in Canadian wheat therefore is sought. But the short fermentation process, which is used in most other modern countries, including Canada, is gradually being introduced in Scotland and if it ultimately becomes general the result may have been on that, rather than in Canada, for Canadian wheat."

France is a white-bread eating nation like Canada wheat is used, since its importation is greatly restricted. In Belgium wheat is white bread and about 30 per cent of Canadian wheat is used. In France, a factor of Belgian bread flour. They are the wheat of the world and Canada is as good a product as they can get anywhere. Practically the same quality is available in Holland. "In Germany bread is considered a great export, the wheat made from the home-grown crop. Most of the wheat flour used goes into the production of bread. The morning loaf that asks so well and travels so far, is made from the larger breads are usually made from the wheat or wheat-yield mixture. They say Canadian wheat has its way into Germany at the present time, but the fact is that the law of the wheat and rye flour is not so abundant in Germany and is a very delicate matter."

Rats Devouring Crops

Peeps On Trilene As Cuckoo Island Are Facing Ruin

The dominance of rats which began to swarm in 1922 from wrecks, left Trilene as a cuckoo island, half-way between South Africa and South America, threatened to bring ruin to the island people who have been unable to move.

Officers of the British freighter "Hesperus" which arrived recently from South Africa, on its way to South America, reported that the rats this year are devouring all the crops before they mature. The rats are now so numerous that the officers said, they are eating pears from the family hedges of the island. They are also eating all of the island's 127 inhabitants.

Most of the island's population is known, probably, until next Christmas when a British ship makes an annual visit with supplies and plans—which this year will contain a small supply of rats.

Anxiety is great because in 1929, when the potato crop failed, the rats were an starvation relief when the Christmas ship appeared.

Night Driving Dangerous

Fifty-eight out of every one hundred deaths from automobile accidents occurred during dark or dusk hours. The careful motorist drives at night in the dark, but he does by day. Poor visibility and failure to deal glaring lights with the further obstacles are great causes of most night accidents on the highway.

We have seven senses. Five of them will take care of themselves. The sixth, called common sense, and a sense of humor.

Disregard from these their leaves empty every one of these days, but the process is gradual and unnoted.

Farming In The Argentine

In view of the important position of the Argentine as an agricultural producer, and bearing in mind that Argentine farmer uses the most up-to-date farm machinery, which is almost exclusively imported from Canada and the United States, a few facts regarding agriculture in the Argentine provide an interesting background for the Canadian farmer.

The Argentine has an average of 48 million acres annually under cultivation. It is the largest country in the world with a total of 1,000,000,000 acres. Signs Which Predict The Weather

Throughout last winter and this summer, the weather has displayed features, undreamed of in the prediction, for a week or more in July last, there was a heat spell that melted the snow and melted the ice, its toll of life and death throughout the continent.

If we go back to the time, as the almanac used to say, the weather prophets tell us what the weather will be for the future. There are the goose-pigeons, and those who observe the movements of the stars and other nature signs. Animals whose sense to have a kind of intuition power to foresee weather developments not visible to human eyes.

Many weather signs appear merely fantastic, like the supposed appearance of the rainbow before a storm. A man, the theory that the weather for a month is predicted after each particular day at the close of the preceding month.

Many persons regarded it as possible that nature in some unaccountable manner does provide for her own future. The weather is the result of air with which to meet a hard winter. It would seem as if the weather was the result of a summer during which the animal food was abundant.

If there are plenty of nuts, you can expect the weather to be very prosperous and silky. They will stand around as proudly as the hand-maidens of the court. The weather is the result of a summer during which the animal food was abundant.

Canada had every reason to be interested in the new British empire. It was the largest of her creation. Lord Tweedmouth, who addressed the Canadian club in Vancouver, expressed the empire growth of the days of its present conception and asked of its future course.

"I think that the idea of the new British empire, its security in a distressed world and what contribution it could make to the world's peace, when depended the security of civilization."

"I see no hope in the ideal which attracts some people—that of a world without war. The British empire, as it is, is not perfect enough to stand alone in the world."

"I think this is generally mistaken. The world is not the Dominion have from the start labored to secure, through the League of Nations, the peace of the world."

Social Justice

Reorganization of The World's Economic Life Needs Necessary

The forces which are driving the world towards closer integration must prevail, unless the whole fabric of our civilization is to collapse. Another Dark Age to ensue. As has already been shown, the political tensions which are now becoming intolerable are to a large extent economic in their origin. They are the outcome and visible signs of the unworkableness of the present system. They indicate conditions which make economic world-war, in which every man's hand is against his neighbor, is inevitable.

To escape the fate which now threatens is not impossible, but it can only be done by a radical reorganization of the world's economic life. There is a general will to escape. If nations were to give up their arms and their way out will be found. If they prefer to allow political hatreds to guide economic policy, if they elevate the ideals of acquisition or personalism above that of social justice, then there is no way out.

The real decision which now confronts the world is one of values. There can be no social justice without peace. The moral and military ideals are totally incompatible. Higher ethical and cultural standards can only be developed by economic progress, to which war is an insuperable bar.

Conditioning the better world that can be promoted by conquest has been the policy of the world since the dawn of history. It can only be by undermining the moral, social and economic foundations of our present civilization that a better world can be created.

The world is still struggling to avoid the abyss to the brink of which it was brought by the great war. A repetition would engulf it in flames. It is not possible to maintain social justice between nations and between individuals who are driven to it is untenable under the present constitution of society or under the existing world order. Nations are unable to become rebels against man. Only through a new organization of the world's economic life can peace and justice and freedom be made permanent.
